

stone bowl sits near the Anasazi Ruins in Aztec, New Mexico. A new theory suggests that the three largest archaeological sites in the Southwest —

Chaco Canyon, Aztec Ruins and Casas Grandes — represent three successive stages of the same political regime.

AP Photos